St Louis Boys Did Well But Couldn't Win

BARNEY JOY

Who Pitched for the St. Louis Boys in the Final Game with Mique Fisher's Spaldings

Great buckets and showers of enthusiasm were spilled all over the field at the Baseball Park yesterday afternoon by the constituents and supporters of the St. Louis team, but, sad to relate, all their shouting and "rooting" was of no avail. Whenever the local aggregation happened to get a man on base, and he it said to their credit that they did exceedingly well, considering the talent they were up against, the fans in the bleachers and grandstand did themselves proud in their efforts to make themselves heard.

Taking everything into consideration, the game was far from being what it "might have been." The local lads were suffering from a trifling touch of stage-fright, at least, the consensus of opinion seemed to be that they could and would have done a great deal better had it not been for the fact that they realized that they were up against an all-star bunch of ball-throwers. In spots, the work of the Saints shone brilliantly, for instance, the extraordinary good fielding of Bushnell, who covered the left garden, and the flying one-handed stop of Evers on short of a hard-hit grounder, but this kind of work was the exception rather than the rule. There are some mighty good exponents of the national game in the local team, but until they learn to play together and work as a unit rather than each man for himself, as they undoubtedly have been and are doing at the present time, they will never attain that perfection which distinguishes a professional team.

St. Louis looked like a winner in the opening canto of yesterday's battle. The Spalding aggregation swung at the spheroid first with big Hildebrand as their representative. He met a good one on the nose and it looked pretty for two sacks at the least, but "Old Trusty" Bushnell got a big hike on himself and pulled down what looked sure like a safe one. Pat Donahue was the second man to face big Barney Joy and he arrived safe on the initial sack by reason of an error by Johnnie Williams on third. Then followed one of the pretty plays of the game, when Soares pulled a long foul out of the air and doubled Donahue on first, retiring the side. Nothing doing for St. Louis in their half of the inning. En Sue, Evers and Lo On being retired in 1-2-3 fashion.

Real fireworks of a most spectacular variety were displayed in the second inning. Poor old Barney Joy helped matters along after Williams had reached first, by throwing the ball into the bleachers, and then giving free tickets to a couple more of the Coast team, which was followed up by an error on the part of the second baseman. This little touch of balloon-ascensionism netted the batters a total of four runs, without a single hit.

There were only two lamentable features of note in the game; one will be described later, and the other was the calling-out at first in the third inning of the little Chinese speedster, En Sue, by Umpire Vannatta, after he had clearly beaten the ball to the bag. It was hard luck for the locals, but they took the decision like true sportsmen, without a murmur. The other deplorable feature of the game happened in the fourth inning when the St. Louis team had chased two runs over the plate, and had men on bases waiting to score. Then the leaguers acted like a bunch of kids in the way they foolishly kicked at decisions of the umpire. Of course, it is natural for a team to take every chance when it is losing ground and the Coast team may be excused on this account.

The fourth inning ended with the score 4 to 2 in favor of the big fellows from the States. To open up the fifth, Dashwood smashed a long fly out to Bushnell with the usual result—he was out. Barney took revenge on Henley by striking him out, and, after Hildebrand had reached first on an error and paroled the second sack, Donahue fouled out. The Saints didn't see first in their half of the swatting. Soares flew out to Hildebrand; Bushnell was thrown out at first, and En Sue swung in the air three times.

By virtue of "Blondie" Williams' long drive for four bases into the right garden in the sixth, the Spaldings annexed another tally, making the score read 5 to 2. "Helene" was thrown out at first, Nealon bumped a long one to Bushnell, and Blas was caught trying to steal second. Evers, Jimmie Williams and Fernandez met their doom in short order, and the inning closed.

Perhaps the most sensational play of the entire game was pulled off in the seventh, when little Evers, the Saints' clever shortstop, grabbed a hard line drive with his bare mitt and followed it up with a quick recovery and throw, getting his man by a good two feet. "Wild Bill" got his on a fly to Bushnell, and Dashwood couldn't hit one out of the diamond. Henley had the Indian sign on Bushnell, Barney Joy, and Johnnie Williams, and they went out in rotation. That boy Pat Donahue always was
